In a world of whirlwind romance, surprise proposals, shotgun weddings and high speed dating, a girl needs to be in "auto-bride" mode to fit in her fantasy weddings. While maintaining a specific weight would truly be a feat, having long hair is now as easy as putting a hair clip on.

Women painstakingly growing and grooming their hair to waist length in preparation for her wedding day is now an antiquated tale. Hair extensions have made a bride's look book of flowing, tousled hair with curls and coils now a possibility.

For the more fashion-forward and experimental bride, human hair extensions may just be the right thing for you.

Jennifer Sevilla-Go of Lynelle Hair Fashion, the number one supplier of hair extensions and wigs to local make-up artists and celebrities, gives us a 101 on these products.

There are basically three kinds of hair extensions: permanent extensions, clip-on extensions and semi-permanent. The latter two, which are more popular and in demand in the country, are easier to use.

Clip-on extensions are bundled strands of hair that are affixed to the real hair with a simple clip. They will give your hair less damage, if none at all. It is so simple to use that you could actually attach and remove it from your hair by yourself.

Meanwhile, semi-permanent ones are designed to be worn for up to three months and are usually applied over the entire head through several methods, which includes: braiding or weaving, bonding or fusion using glue, silicon, or keratin.
